They do not know whether to these details any statement as to the intervals which necessarily or usually elapse between successive promotions could be added. The Commissioners make this request under the impression that the public and even the educated classes from which candidates are to be expected possess no accurate information on the subject, and that the dissemination of such information would in all probability increase very considerably the number of eligible competitors. The Commissioners hope very shortly to lay before Her Majesty their annual report, and should Lord Stanley be pleased to accede to their request, they will be glad to insert any information with which they may be favoured. Altered to twenty-five for candidates selected in 1859. See next letter.
