Not illustrated. 1914 Excerpt: .fighting force of a nation. England s might on the sea showed that such power lies also in a navy. So William the Second concentrated upon another arm of force, a navy. To this source of power he gave, too, his personal attention, and as the executive of the German people, their support. Imperial power means sea power, and sea power and imperial power are dependent upon each other. $+ He enlisted and maintained the interest and enthusiasm of his people until he had a navy of tremendous strength, second only to that of England, who has long proclaimed herself, Mistress of the Seas. My first and last care is for my fighting forces on land and sea. A Master in Economics THE Emperor has superior knowledge in proportion and economics. He has an accurate system in calculus by which he knows how many men industrially...
