Personally I feel that way, and especially as by my advice a good many in years past have been induced to go into the apple business and today they are plying me with questions and advice as to how they can get out of the orchard business what they were to believe was in it but which they have been unable to secure. This past year they have raised their apples; they have got fruit but there are no buyers in the field, and they do not know what to do with their products. This is not the condition that is peculiar to our own state alone, it is general. Orchardists of other states have met with the same difficult I cannot believe that the comparatively few hundreds of people who have been induced to go into this business have been able to raise so much fruit that there is such an enormous over-production as to cause the present low price. Especially do I think so when there are right here in our own country ninety-five million of people to eat it for nine months of the year. The whole trouble I believe is that there is something wrong in the marketing. If we can do anything to help that end of the problem it is the thing we must do. We must try...
